

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system for tuning the text-to-speech conversion process having a text-to-speech engine that converts the input text into a processed text form which includes speech features. A visual editing interface displaying the processed text form using graphical indicators on an output device to allow a user to edit the text and graphical indicators to modify the speech features of the text input.